

Paper prototype.

Basically I have made my digital game into a board game as in going through the whole world. Your goal is to go through the whole steps and defeat all the monsters. You have only 1 dice and 1 player. (board games like this could add additional players, however they do not interact with each other much, which makes it a race game).

- - usual steps
- - monsters
- - mental state
- - items

There is a special event that you cannot miss. For example, a special event is on 1 step, but you got 3. You still step into a special event. Each special event has its own rules on what you should do. Combination of items together or/and rolling dice with 2 numbers.

Every step represents a different card you get, unless its usual steps. There are three stacks of cards in the game which you pull whenever you step on the corresponding color on the board.

Red colours are cards about monsters. You can defeat them either with an item you have or rolling a specific roll on a dice to win over.

Yellow represents your mental health while you are going through the world. You may go back or double your steps for the next roll.

Purple ones represent an item card that you can use in specific situations. For example, you earn a map of the place you are in. It helps you make additional steps to your rolled dice.

Action-by-action report of a game sessions:

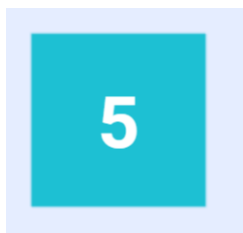

(i am using virtual roll dice)

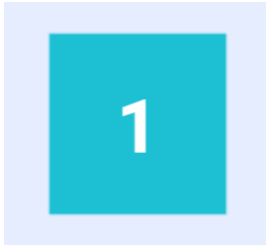

I stepped on the yellow step. I draw a card of mental health, which says: “You are determined, make additional 2 steps”.

I did 2 steps and I got an item card. Item card says “You found nothing”.

Rolling dice again.

I got into a mental step. It says “You are scared, take 1 step back”. It got me into the usual step, nothing happens.

Yellow step. “You are in your usual state”. It means nothing happens.

Red step. “You have encountered a monster (have a picture of the monster). To win the monster use flashlight or roll number 4”. I do not have any item on me, so i roll my dice.

I defeated the monster.

Usual step.

I got into a special event. Now I get a special card with information about the tower and how to win over it. “Use a flute/cane and roll 6, to pass the dark tower” or “Roll 6 two times to do so”.

(In the situation you rolled smth else and used an item it doesn't consider as if you wasted your items. It is possible to use the same cards. However if it is making the game too easy could leave it as wasted)

You go through like this till the end boss which has its own system of winning.